As a three-time Olympian with three Olympic medals, Alexander Massialas is one of the most successful men's foil fencers in U.S. history.

He was part of Team USA's bronze medal-winning foil teams at both the 2016 and 2020 Games. At the Rio Games in 2016, he also won silver in the individual foil event, becoming the first U.S. foil fencer to win an individual silver medal at the Olympic Games since 1932 and the first U.S. man to win two fencing medals at the same Olympics in more than 100 years.

Massialas has climbed medal stands throughout his international career — including at the cadet, junior and senior levels. In 2019, he helped Team USA win its first men's foil team gold at the Senior World Championship in Hungary. At domestic events in the U.S., Massialas has been equally impressive, winning two NCAA championships at the collegiate level and the 2010 U.S. national championship. That latter gold medal came at age 16, making Massialas the youngest men's foil national champion in U.S. history.

For all his fencing accolades on the piste, Massialas has been just as active off it. This year, Massialas announced a coast-to-coast tour where he'll inspire and encourage the next generation of world-class fencers. Yes, each clinic will include plenty of fencing coaching straight from the Olympian himself. But Massialas will also impart vital lessons in leadership, ensuring that these young fencers develop skills both tangible and intangible.

With his success at all levels of competition, his commitment to growing fencing worldwide and his passion for the power of our sport to change lives, Alexander Massialas would make a phenomenal addition to the FIE Commission of Athletes.
